

They want to stay in their home. But they can't find a home health aide to help them!

It is called "Aging in Place". Our community's elderly parents don't want to leave their homes where they feel safe and comfortable.

A home health aide can help them stay in the homes they cherish. The aide loves to help them stay healthy and as independent as possible. They have grown to trust and rely upon the aide.

But the home health aide needs to live near where he or she works. The aide loves the job but the aide doesn't make a lot of money. The aide struggles every month - to pay the bills and feed the children. The aide may soon be forced to leave this very special and rewarding job because he or she can no longer afford to live in their own home nearby.

THEY NEED A HOME HEALTH AIDE WHO LIVES NEARBY!

THE AIDE WANTS, REALLY NEEDS, AN AFFORDABLE HOME NEAR WORK!

When a segment of the population is forced to live elsewhere, the community suffers. Businesses can't find the employees they need. Community-based volunteer services disappear. The ability of our community to provide safe, decent and affordable housing is critical its success.
